

The 1924 Invincibles All Black team

The 1924 All Blacks rugby team which became known as 'The Invincibles'.

The New Zealand rugby union team which toured the United Kingdom, Ireland, France and Canada in 1924-25 was nicknamed 'The Invincibles' after it won all 32 of its games overseas. The tour included four test matches, one each against Ireland, England, Wales, and France. Overall the team scored 838 points and conceded only 116.

The team was captained by Cliff Porter, although injury restricted him to 17 games, including the test against France. The vice-captain Jock Richardson took over the captaincy for the remainder of the tour. The team included some of the great names of New Zealand rugby, including Cyril and Maurice Brownlie and the legendary George Nepia, who somewhat incredibly played in all 32 tour matches.
