New Zealand marks dedication of Christchurch cardboard cathedral

15 August 2013

The cardboard cathedral can accommodate up to 100 people.

New Zealand's city of Christchurch has formally marked the completion of its new cardboard cathedral with a dedication service.

The structure, which uses 190 cardboard tubes, temporarily replaces the one damaged by the 2011 earthquake until a permanent one can be built.

Church officials say the completion marks a milestone in the city's recovery efforts.

The 6.5 magnitude earthquake badly damaged the old Christchurch cathedral, which was built in the late 19th century. Church officials said in March that it was beyond repair and had to come down.

Japanese architect Shigeru Ban designed the cardboard cathedral. The irregular A-frame design includes stacked glass sunboxes, can seat 700 people and is built to last for half a century.

The building is meant to be waterproof, although leaks meant some of the cardboard tubing became soggy and had to be replaced after a heavy downpour.

"The old cathedral symbolises the city in many ways and we think this cathedral is a symbol that Christchurch is regrouping and rebuilding," said Joaquin Plasson, the mayor of French Polynesia.

"The community has a cathedral again. It's a place where people can come for quiet contemplation in the city centre and somewhere we can hold concerts and art exhibitions."

Share this story

More on this story

Cardboard cathedral for quake-hit New Zealand city
18 April 2012

Description for quake-hit Christchurch cathedral
2 March 2012

New Zealand remembers 2011 Christchurch quake victims
22 February 2012

First look inside collapsed Christchurch Cathedral
22 February 2011

Features

"There's no such thing as a bad vibe"

British blast: I can't afford to fix my house

Tuesday and Thursday's animal of exotic poisons

Did Moeid really send his transfer request by fax?

Living in fear of sugar cane serial killings

Coronavirus casts doubt on Brazil's carnival plans

The rare teens Mike Pence met headlines

BBC World News: The strategy that turns daydreams into reality

The history of the Eastern Mediterranean
Elsewhere on the BBC

Lyrica pill: Have you been getting those strange feelings?

Feeling hot
What happens to your body in menopause?

Most Read

1. Janie Ellen: Teenager arrested over Wisconsin protests' deaths

2. Coronavirus: Plymouth teens test positive after Ghana test kit

3. Hurricane Laura: 'Will cause unquantifiable storm surge'

4. Coronavirus: Some restaurants closed just one day to September

5. Pilar Gadea: Site of Malaysian body found 'searched several times'

6. Teacher's baby care number on toy instruction to get help for ill mum

7. 64-year-old shigeru samshu: 'Handling diagnosed with bowel cancer'

8. Coronavirus: Delayed Expat passengers face uncertain quarantine

9. Jacob Tidten: What we know about Wisconsin police shooting

10. Bread price may rise after biofuel wheelbarrow

Why you can trust BBC News

BBC News Services
On your mobile On smart speakers Get news alerts Contact BBC News

Explore the BBC

Search
Sport
Work Life
Travel
Health
Weather

Terms of Use
Privacy Policy
Accessibility
Contact the BBC
Advertise with us

About the BBC
Contact
Advertise

Copyright © 2021 BBC. The BBC is not responsible for the content of external sites. Read about our approach to external linking.