Final Report of the Expert Panel on Modernising Child Youth and Family

In response to the release of the Expert Panel's final report, the Government has announced major state care reforms and a complete overhaul of Child, Youth and Family to improve the long-term life outcomes for New Zealand's most vulnerable population. The Minister for Social Development, Hon Anne Tolley, says that the whole system needs to be transformed if we are to give vulnerable children and young people the protection and life opportunities they deserve.

A new entity will be in place which will have high aspirations for all children and address their short and long-term wellbeing and support their transition into adulthood. It will focus on five core services – prevention, intensive intervention, care support services, transition support and a youth justice service aimed at preventing offending and reoffending."

While the new entity will be in place by 1 April 2017, the wider programme of transformational change is expected to take up to five years to be fully implemented.

Phase one legislation reform: Children, Young Persons, and Their Families (Advocacy, Workforce, and Age Settings) Amendment Bill

The first phase of legislative reform, The Children, Young Persons, and Their Families (Advocacy, Workforce, and Age Settings) Amendment Bill (<https://www.beehive.govt.nz/release/state-care-reform-bill-passes-third-reading>), was passed in December 2016 and will take effect from 1 April 2017.

The key changes in the Bill are:

- extending the jurisdiction of the care and protection system to include 17 year-olds
- ensuring that the views of children and young people are taken into account at an individual level and in the development of service and policy
- supporting the establishment of independent advocacy services
- enabling a broader set of professionals to perform a wider set of functions.

New children's agency established – the Ministry for Vulnerable Children, Oranga Tamariki

To support the transformation of the vulnerable children's system, the Government has agreed to establish a new stand-alone government department.

The creation of the new Ministry signals a 'whole of sector', child-centred approach to working with vulnerable children and young people. It establishes the new Ministry as a single point of accountability which will ensure that government agencies work together to provide coherent and complete services to these children, young people and their families.

The Minister for Social Development has announced that the new department will be called the Ministry for Vulnerable Children, Oranga Tamariki and it will be operational from 1 April 2017.

The Ministry for Vulnerable Children, Oranga Tamariki will be responsible for the care and protection of vulnerable children and young people, youth justice services and operational adoption services. The Children's Action Plan Directorate and the Children's Teams will become part of the new Ministry.

Community Investment functions relating to funding and contracting services for vulnerable children will transfer to the new Ministry, along with family and sexual violence services relating to child victims or perpetrators, complaint and grievance panel services and policy advice relevant to these functions.

The establishment for the Ministry for Vulnerable Children, Oranga Tamariki and the transfer of roles and functions will have a significant impact on the Ministry of Social Development.

From 1 April 2017, the Ministry of Social Development will continue to have responsibility for the assessment and payment of welfare benefits and entitlements, employment support and training, social housing assessments, case management and purchasing places for emergency and social housing.

The Ministry of Social Development will manage funding and contracting for social services not focused on vulnerable children (for example, budgeting advisory services, elder abuse and neglect), as well as those family and sexual violence services not directly related to child victims or perpetrators. It will be responsible for the Office for Seniors and Services for Seniors, the Office for Disability Issues and the Ministry of Youth Development and for the resolution of historic and contemporary claims against Child, Youth and Family.

A comprehensive programme of work (<http://www.msd.govt.nz/about-msd-and-our-work/work-programmes/investing-in-children/index.html>) is underway to implement these changes and to ensure that the new Ministry is operational from 1 April 2017.

The Cabinet papers that outline these legislative proposals are published below.

Transition arrangements

Following Cabinet's agreement in July 2016 on the roles and functions of the Ministry for Vulnerable Children, Oranga Tamariki and the Ministry of Social Development, the Chief Executives of the two Ministries agreed the allocation of capability each agency will need to support its functions. This includes the allocation of existing MSD staff and appropriations between the agencies and final decisions on the operating model for the provision of corporate support services. The two agencies will work closely together, building on shared experience to better help the clients both agencies work with.

The Cabinet paper outlining this allocation is published below:

Phase two legislation reform: Children, Young Persons, and Their Families (Oranga Tamariki) Legislation Bill

The second phase of legislation reform- the Children, Young Persons, and Their Families (Oranga Tamariki) Legislation Bill - was introduced on 8 December 2016. The proposals in this Bill cover a wide-ranging set of legislative reforms.

The Bill will provide the foundations for the system by:

- ensuring an effective and accountable child-centred system
- improving outcomes for Māori
- sharing information to better respond to vulnerable children and young people

The Bill will also support the operation of the new Ministry's five core services to:

- target early investment in the lives of children and families
- respond to concerns
- help children and young people develop life-long relationships with caregiving families
- help children and young people to lead crime free lives
- help young people transition to independence.
