

Poll puts National ahead of Labour

15 Feb, 2004 5:35pm

Don Brash

2004

Newstalk ZB, 2004

The year's first Colmar-Brunton poll puts National at 45 per cent, seven points ahead of Labour.

That is a 17-point jump for National since December last year.

It is also the first time Helen Clark's government's been knocked from the top spot.

Don Brash is still 10 points behind Helen Clark as preferred leader.

But he has risen 11 points to 24 per cent.

Don Brash said it was because of his stance on race relations.

He said his controversial Orewa speech struck a chord with many New Zealanders.

Dr Brash said he will maintain National's popularity with future speeches on other major topics like the economy, social welfare, education, and security.

A political expert said the Labour-led Government has paved the way for National's huge leap in the polls.

Dr Jon Johansson said National had pushed the race relations debate.

Related articles:

He said pakeha have been uneasy about the issue because the Government has not properly explained its approach to Maori.

Dr Johansson said National may drop in popularity when it starts to focus on other topics like the economy.

He said National will have a hard time keeping its lead in the polls.

- Newstalk ZB

Trending on NZ Herald

3rd

NEW ZEALAND

Air NZ plane turns back after pilot's mid-air drama

5 Jul, 2017 7:21am

🕒 2 minutes to read

Passengers off medical emergency flight told to phone
0800 number to rebook

BUSINESS

Boom over? Auckland property stays frozen

5 Jul, 2017 5:00am

🕒 4 minutes to read

Numbers of houses sold plummet as mortgage restrictions bite.

SPORT

Woodward: Steve Hansen got it wrong

5 Jul, 2017 6:57am

🕒 3 minutes to read

Clive Woodward has criticised
Steve Hansen's decision making in the second test defeat.